IN BRIEF

■ The future of the Jewish people was debated by 150 young Jewish leaders from all walks of life at a five-day annual conference in Jerusalem this week. Jewish authors, innovators, artists and entrepreneurs from 25 countries participated in the ROI Global Summit for Young Jewish Innovators to exchange ideas and opinions on the issues shaping the Jewish world. ROI was created in 2005 with funding from the Charles and Lynn Schusterman Family Foundation and the Bernie Marcus Foundation, and in partnership with Taglit-Birthright. Since then, more than 600 alumni have gone on to create initiatives and projects directly inspired by the summit.
